Maryland Correctional Enterprises CARES Program Graduation Wednesday, 9/29 at 6 p.m. in Sykesville

Former inmate who now works for MCE is keynote speaker at Central Md. Correctional Facility in Sykesville

Towson, MD (September 27, 2010)---Maryland Correctional Enterprises (MCE), the Division of Correction's (DOC) prison industry arm and one of the top prison industry groups in the nation, will graduate 17 inmates from the innovative MCE CARES program Wednesday night, September 29, at 6 p.m. at the Central Maryland Correctional Facility (CMCF) at Buttercup and Raincliffe roads in Sykesville.

CARES stands for Continuing Allocation of RE-entry Services, and is a major MCE effort to ensure that inmates are prepared for work on the outside. CARES is offered to inmates who have worked for MCE for at least one year and are within two years of release. Participants work fulltime at the MCE laundry plant at CMCF and take evening classes on employment readiness. These classes help inmates with their decision-making, and with job referral tips such as how to connect with private employers who hire ex-offenders, and how to utilize the One Stop Career Centers. The goal of CARES is to make inmates more employable, and to give them a head start on employment before they return to society.

The program began with 18 inmates in July of 2008. This graduation will bring the CARES total to more than 100 inmates.

The evening's keynote speaker is Thomas Lane, an MCE graphic designer who turned his life around while serving more than ten years in the Division of Correction. Mr. Lane was an MCE inmate employee who was hired fulltime when he completed his DOC sentence. He has won numerous honors for his successful transition. He is very involved in community activities, and is the co-founder of the Anointed Ex-Offenders, a Christian singing and ministering group that travels across the region---including inside prisons.

Maryland Correctional Enterprises is one of the top ten prison industries in the nation. It employs a record 2,000 inmates in an average month, and in FY '09 approached $53 million in revenues. MCE has operations all across the state; its inmates make everything from license plates and uniforms to flags and signs. Its chief executive officer, Steve Shiloh, was recently awarded the highest national honor for a prison industry executive.

But recently, MCE has gone way beyond traditional products and services, giving inmates a chance to become involved in truly meaningful projects that benefit the environment and restore history. At Antietam National Battlefield, inmates have restored the Piper Orchard and planted more than 3,800 trees. MCE inmates have harvested, grown, and replanted shoreline-restoring bay grasses and made thousands of oyster spat cages to help replenish oysters in the Chesapeake Bay and its tributaries.

Studies have shown that offenders with at least one year of MCE employment are less than half as likely to recidivate as general population inmates. CARES extends the employability of these offenders through their final years in the correctional system, resulting in a smooth transition into the workforce upon release, hopefully even further reducing the recidivism rate.

Maryland Correctional Enterprises sell its products and services only to non-profits and government enterprises, not to private citizens. Its main mission is to teach inmates critical job skills and teach them to develop a strong work ethic. MCE operations include a meat plant (Hagerstown) whose inmates annually prepare 800 or more turkeys for the Bea Gaddy Thanksgiving dinner for the poor in Baltimore; furniture making and restoration plants; graphics and sign making; uniform and flag sewing operations, just to name a few.

Recently, MCE unveiled a web site allowing customers to order online at www.mce.md.gov.
